

Prof. David O. Carpenter, MD, PhD (USA) is Director of the Institute for Health and the Environment, a Collaborating Center of the World Health Organization (WHO) at the School of Public Health, State University of New York at Albany, USA. He is an internationally renowned expert in the human health effects of environmental contaminants, including metals, organic compounds and non-ionizing radiation. He also serves as professor of environmental health sciences at UAlbany's School of Public Health. Professor Carpenter is a public health physician who received his medical degree from Harvard Medical School, and has authored more than 370 peer-reviewed publications, 6 books and 50 reviews and book chapters. He has previously served as Director of the Wadsworth Center of the New York State Department of Health, and as Dean of the University at Albany School of Public Health